How to choose GCSEs and A Levels

Speaker: William Croston, Director of International Programme, Head of UCAS and Exams
Norwich School

I have worked at Norwich School for over 25 years, teaching modern languages all the way through from Age 11 to Oxbridge classes. Alongside my teaching, I am the Director of the International programme at Norwich School since 2019 and also play a key role in the smooth running of the School's UCAS system and the public examinations system as the Head of Centre. It has been an absolute pleasure working closely with our international pupils and their families to give them the best possible experience at Norwich School and to help prepare them for the next step in their lives. I am very happy to advise any family or future pupil on the best subject choices and university options to consider to help them fulfill their full potential.
